Projects (Available on GitHub)

- Predicting Diabetes Using Machine Learning | Comparison of Classification Models
Developed and evaluated machine learning models—Logistic Regression, KNN, Decision Tree, Random Forest, and SVM—to predict diabetes status. Key insights revealed glucose, BMI, DPF, and age as critical features. Logistic Regression offered stability and interpretability, while KNN achieved the highest test accuracy, making it suitable for large-scale screenings. GridSearchCV optimization enhanced model performance, underscoring the value of hyperparameter tuning in predictive healthcare analytics.
Skills: Python (scikit-learn), Feature Engineering, Model Evaluation, Hyperparameter Tuning, Data Visualization)
- Utilizing MCMC in Python to Explore the Parameter Space of an Exoplanet Transit
Utilized MCMC in Python to model exoplanet transits, fitting CRCAO photometry data with the batman package to estimate parameters like planet radius and transit timing, and presented findings at the 241st AAS meeting.
Skills: Python (pandas, matplotlib, numpy, emcee, & batman)
- Insights into Dog Behavior: Analyzing Dognition Data with MySQL
Analyzed trends in canine behavior using MySQL queries on the Dognition database, refining data management and analytical skills as part of Duke University's 'Managing Big Data with MySQL' course.
Skills: MySQL, Writing Queries, Data Cleaning, and Big Data

- Interactive Animation of Museum Visitor Paths and Hourly Room Traffic in Tableau
Created an interactive animation in Tableau to visualize museum visitor paths and hourly room traffic, showcasing data visualization techniques learned in DataCamp's 'Data Visualization in Tableau' course.

Skills: Tableau, Data Visualization & Analysis

 - Construct, align, and focus a low- resolution spectrograph that collects spectral data of high mass stars at the Mt. Kent Observatory (Australia).
 - Predicting future transit times of exoplanets by writing python programs that analyze and reduce photometry data from TESS and Mt Kent Observatory to accurately update their current t0 and period value.
- Astrophysics Researcher | KURF Grant
Kutztown University
Dr. Phillip Reed
Kutztown, PA
October 2021 – March 2023
 - Writing python programs that model and fit the transit and radial velocities of star systems w/an exoplanet or binary star and determining the mass and radius of the transiting object using data collected from C. R. Chambliss Astronomical Observatory (CRCAO) and the Transiting Exoplanet Survey Satellite (TESS).
 - Collecting spectroscopy & photometry data of potential exoplanets using the 0.61m telescope at CRCAO. Performing maintenance on the telescope to keep the instruments running optimally displaying problem solving and critical thinking skills.
